CONSULAR POLICE CONTACTS

Most contacts have remained in their jobs. One of our best contacts has moved up from Chief of Detective Division to replace a Colonel as Director of Security for Kabul Province. Another contact who was widely known to be corrupt has been replaced by a police captain who appears vigorous and ^{earnest} ~~intelligent~~ ~~ix~~ and who speaks good English, but who is otherwise an unknown quantity. Over all, I would say that we are even better off now than before in our contacts.

The new government seems sincere in its attempts to clear up the hippie-narcotics problem. Whether this new zeal will last is, of course, another question. One world traveler was heard to complain "you can't even bribe the police for ~~xxxxxxxxxxxx~~ a visa extension."
